

WILL ESTABLISH SCHOOL FOR GIRLS

Vocational Training for Moral Interest of Young Girls To Be Fostered.

A committee composed of Mrs. Joe Brown, Mrs. Mark Senior, Mrs. T. H. McClure, Mrs. Walter Henson, Mrs. James Johnston, Mrs. Kenzie Thatcher, Mrs. Lucius Mansfield and others will go to Rome, Ga., Wednesday to visit the Berry school and get ideas as to how to conduct a vocational school. As a result of a meeting of young women held Friday at the Y. W. C. A., an organization was effected which will adopt a junior work in the way of a vocational school for morally delinquent children.

The officers elected were Mrs. Mark Senior, president; Mrs. J. L. Hutchison, vice-president; Mrs. George Gault, secretary, and Miss Louise Jewell, treasurer. At a meeting held earlier in the week, Capt. Kern, chief of military police, and Rev. T. S. McCallie had come before the assembly and told of the needs of some provision for the saving of erring little girls who are too young to be sent to the Crittenton home, and through moral deficiency have learned too much of the end, and lessons of life to be allowed with children, either at the orphanage or in the public school rooms.

Miss Mary Hopgood, matron of the Crittenton home went on to New York the day after Christmas and remained a week or more, gathering information as to how this junior work is done by the national Crittenton home, as it is considered a part of their work but is carried on in separate houses.

Mrs. Joe Brown, vice-president of the board of the local Crittenton home, says, as it is to be an industrial school, that a place with a little tillable land will be needed, but no idea of a site for the school has as yet developed, and the members of the organization will be better informed after their visit to the Berry school.

All due credit is given by Mrs. Brown to the Bonny Oaks board in connection with the original idea of establishing this school in or near the city than the county industrial school age it was suggested by an active member of the Bonny Oaks board.

The reason given for this is that the girls' building at Bonny Oaks is built as a dormitory, and the seven cases termed as "military cases" are not ones to go in dormitories with either younger and innocent ones or older and wiser ones; besides, when these girls get away from Bonny Oaks it sometimes takes hours to get a transient officer and find them. They have no automobile at the industrial school and this member said that when the girls are picked up at night brought to town in a machine, how is a man in a wagon to follow them?

Therefore the board decided to cooperate with the Crittenton home and devise plans for these truly unfortunate little girls by which they can have a home and receive instructions that will enable them to be self-supporting.

Both members of the Bonny Oaks board and the Crittenton home agree that there is very urgent need of the junior home and while there is a dearth in the funds at the Crittenton home to undertake such a project, a campaign will be launched to start a fund to build the school.

It is stated that girls ranging from 11 to 16 years, as many as seven in number, already known to the police and officers are awaiting the establishment of such a school.

Wisecarers among weather prophets are claiming the wisdom to forecast just what may be expected of the weather from now on. An old man in St. Elmo calls attention to the fact that the first snow of the season occurred on Nov. 18, and according to ancient dictum, eighteen spells of blizzard, snow and cold may be expected.

BIRDS ARE BEINGS— DON'T FORGET THEM

Birds with frozen feathers are an added feature of the winter scene, and their weak efforts to find a little warmth in the sunshine and pick up a few crumbs are pitiful. In the general discomfort it is hoped every one is not too busy seeking personal well-being to think of the feathered tribes, who must find it difficult, at best, to eke out an existence while mothered by such a frozen old world. A Chattanooga lady calls attention to their helpless condition and says she is sure to throw out the handful of crumbs if one has not done so before this winter.

PROMINENT CITIZENS
TALK ON SUFFRAGE
Many Delighted With Passage of Federal Amendment by Lower House.

W. B. Swaney, attorney and progressive citizen, in speaking of the passage of the federal amendment granting suffrage to women by the lower house of congress, said that he was most agreeable surprise, even while devoutly hoping for such a consummation. The president's decision, he said, had much to do with swinging the doubtful vote into line.

Especially does Mr. Swaney welcome the action of congress because, as he points out, prohibition and woman suffrage always go hand in hand.

However, two of his grinding principles in the matter are still the old Jeffersonian doctrines that "all governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed" and "taxation without representation is tyranny." In recognition of these, no full democracy may exist without the feminine vote. The ideals of democracy, as taught by Tacitus, is a heritage of the Aryan race, expressed variously in the forms of government of the old Germanic tribes, the subsequent monarchies being but pervisions of the original governmental ideals.

The pendulum is therefore swinging backward to the purer forms of government, in the slogan "save the world for democracy." The granting of equal suffrage in England and America is, he believes, the initial step to universal suffrage. England, of course, must still face the problems of property qualifications in the exercise of the right of franchise, and the time-honored system of caste. Equal suffrage in England he believes will settle those questions shortly. The prose writings of John Milton and Edmund Burke point the way.

A volume by Freeman on the "Growth of the English Constitution" shows, he says, the struggle for ascendancy in the world between two opposing factions, the apotheosis of the state, as comprehended in the Roman ideal, and government by consent, as expressed in the terms of democracy. This, he said, is the meaning of the world-war, as well as the principle underlying the movement for the enfranchisement of women.

As to her right to exercise her voting power, her past and present record along educational lines, and her present admirable service to the government in these times of stress, demonstrate her citizenship to be a necessity.

DR. FRED W. HIXSON.
Dr. Hixson, president of the University of Chattanooga, told a representative of The News he had been congratulating himself that he added his weight of influence to secure the passage of the resolution, and believes favorable action by the senate is assured. He expressed much satisfaction over the passage of the resolution by the lower house.

JUDGE MARTIN A. FLEMING.
Judge Fleming, emphatically declared himself in favor of the resolution and also expressed his admiration over the manner in which women had demonstrated their right to citizenship by their loyalty and service to the government.

"Whatever doubtful opinion one may have entertained," he said "concerning the ability of women to exercise the rights of citizenship, has been completely dispelled by what we see around us everywhere in woman's war-service. This war has certainly demonstrated woman's ability along many lines, and citizenship is one of these."

COL. ED WATKINS.
Col. Watkins said he had already pressed the matter of woman's suffrage by his working for it.

DR. W. F. SMITH.
As a representative of the Ministerial association, one of the local groups of men who lent such valiant assistance in indorsing the passage of the federal amendment, Dr. W. F. Smith, of First Methodist church, expressed much satisfaction over the action of the house of representatives. He says he approves of the president's views, and wants a full democracy in which there may be no taxation without representation. "To pass such a bill," he said, "was the only proper thing to do, since we have been preaching democracy so long. It is high time that we begin to practice what we preach."

Mrs. J. B. Lauderbach, county demonstrator in home economics, expressed the belief that the passage of the resolution favoring equal suffrage, will demonstrate that woman power is equal to man power and quite as necessary to the general well-being. "I believe," she said, "that good, sensible women will follow the even tenor of their ways quite as well with the vote as they have done in the past without it, and people need expect nothing sensational."

With the added confidence and encouragement secured, votes for women will mean a great deal. For my part I think the federal amendment a wonderful thing, though I feel that now, first, in war service, and, afterward, for the freedom of all women."

Mrs. E. F. Whelan, member of the county school board, said: "While I have never indorsed militant methods, the picketing of the White House and various ideas of the so-called suffragettes, I feel that now as never before that women need the vote for the furtherance of many kinds of public work as well as war service."

"Any woman who has at heart the welfare of children knows as well as a man what laws should be enacted and enforced. Now seems to be the accepted time. I hope equal suffrage may triumph and never depart."

Miss Mabel Chumley, suffragist, expressed in a pointed way the belief that congress, realizing the women, as well as men, are equally affected by the world-war and with them are also as deeply suffering, could do nothing more or less than grant citizenship to the co-laborers. They are being taxed as are the men and with the same kind of money and same spirit of sacrifice are buying liberty bonds. She does not apprehend any difficulty in the passage of the suffrage resolution by the senate.

Young People's Services

CHRISTIAN GROWTH

These Comments on the Uniform Prayer-Service Topic of the Young People's Societies—Christian Endeavor, etc.—for Jan. 13: "Young Christians Reach- ing Upward"—Palmes ixlii:1-8.

(By William T. Ellis.)

The growth that we seek must have three dimensions. It must be downward as roots into the soil of prayer and Bible study and meditation. It must be outward, enlarging the scope of our activities and interest and sympathy and comprehending more of the greatness of God's love and work. Then it must be an upward work. It should reach up yearningly after the mind of God, loving communion with the Father, living without those things that are spiritual, and looking with increasing and steadfast earnestness unto Jesus himself, who is the summit of all our growth.

We are not full-grown Christians until we have attained "unto the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ."

The most deeply rooted Christians thrive best.

Growth upward follows growth downward.

There are no circumstances that can prevent a Christian's spiritual growth.

We rise by kneeling. One great cause of growth is prayer. The Christian grows upward still in the spiritual life are not those who daily and eagerly resort to the closet of communion. Pre-eminent saints become such by diligent cultivation of the devotional life.

Union with Jesus is His own prescription for power and increase. As we abide in him we grow. For Christian growth is due to divine power within, and the power comes of the branch through the vine. Apart from Christ we perish; present with Christ we prosper.

There is a mystery in every Christian life, a mystery apart from which religion itself is inexplicable. That mystery is the Holy Spirit, whom no man has seen and whom no man can understand, yet without whom no man can have salvation of Christian character. One secret of growth is the presence of the spirit in a believer's heart. He is our great helper. Without Him we can do nothing, but by His aid we may grow into the very likeness of Jesus.

In every Christian's daily prayer should be a supplication for the help of the mysterious and mighty Third Person of the Trinity.

All growth comes from within. We do not take on virtues as we put on clothes. Outward graces are but the manifestation of an inward spirit. Excellent Christians are they in whose hearts Christ dwells supremely. What ever is praiseworthy of them has its root in an indwelling presence. If we would be like Christ without we must have Christ within.

The Christian life insures many things to those who accept it. Progress is one of these. We cannot follow Jesus faithfully without going forward. His way is a walk onward. Each new day in His company is a better day, a fuller, nobler, more Christlike day. Therefore, if our lives are not changing "from glory to glory" we well may question whether or not we are truly following Him.

Branches grow only as the roots grow. The inner life must expand with the outward duty. It is easier for us to bear patiently the crosses that come to us than it was a year ago? Are we braver in confessing Christ's name than we used to be? Has the prayer closet an increasing charm, and is the Bible a more loved and luminous book? If so, we may humbly believe that we are growing Christians.

After all, it is a power outside of ourselves that makes possible our Christian growth. Only by the Spirit of the Lord can we be changed into the divine image. Dependence upon the Spirit is the first requirement of growth.

In the darkness and silence of the prayer closet, when the believer pours out his heart in yearning and confession and praise, the luminous presence of the Son of Man is often revealed. It is the good pleasure of the Savior to manifest Himself to the praying Christian, and no man gets close to Christ who does not live much in the attitude and atmosphere of prayer.
